MR. PELL GLADLY RECIPROCATES

Side Light on His Affection for Fuller

QUASHED INDICTMENT

Endorsement Will Carry Small
Weight—A Little History

The following communication from "A Voter" explains to some extent the effusion from Mr. Pell in a recent issue of the Times-Echo. The editor of the Times was quite well satisfied that a tale hung thereby, and here's the tale:

Editor Times:

I see in the Times-Echo of February 20th a letter from that old, whoop 'em up, knock 'em out, republican, Fred Pell, advocating the election of Hon. C. A. Fuller to any office he might ask, prosecuting attorney first—promotions to follow.

This is the same Pell, who, some six years ago, went into the republican convention in this county and helped to endorse Iverson A. Jones, independent candidate for representative of Carroll county against C. A. Fuller, the regular democratic nominee.

Pell bolted the republican convention and came out independent republican office for the purpose of getting a republican vote.

Thereby adding to the republican committee had done every thing they could to get Pell to withdraw from the race without avail, they issued circulars denouncing him and accusing him of selling out. These were sent to every voting precinct in the county. The result was that Pell got only a scattering vote. Fuller received a majority over both Jones and Pell, thereby showing that he did not need Pell in the race.

To a member of the republican committee, Pell gave as a reason for his action that he had been indicted for gambling, and it would cost him a hundred dollars to get out of it. By making this race he was promised that the indictment would be quashed and no attorney's fees be charged—the indictment was quashed.

This same Pell had a similar experience in Indiana when Harrison was elected president. He was running on the populist ticket for representative. When things got good and hot, Pell all at once flopped to the republican side and made republican speeches to the close of the campaign. The republicans won the legislature by a very narrow margin. Pell got strong recommendations from the republican organization of Indiana for Timber Agent, but such a howl was raised by regular republicans that President Harrison was forced to withdraw the nomination.

Pell says, if every one knew Fuller as well as he does every one would vote for him regardless of politics.

We might say if every one knew Pell as well as a few of us do, no one would be influenced to vote for or against anyone on his advice.

Demand Raising of Maine

Sunday afternoon in Carnegie Hall, New York City, the Maine memorial service of the United Spanish War Veterans, was turned into a demonstration designed to raise the battle ship Maine. By a rising vote, an audience which filled the hall, adopted a resolution condemning the "spectacle of the rusted hulk of the ship and rotting bones of its victims, abandoned without sepulchre in alien waters," and urging that congress enact legislation for "the immediate removal of the wreck to our shores and the recovery of the remains of the unclaimed victims for interment in the National Cemetery at Arlington."

A copy of the resolution was sent to the president, the vice president, the secretary of the navy and the members of the senate and the house of representatives.

AN EVENING WITH THE BOOK CLUB

Mr. and Mrs. Grant Swett
Entertain Handsomely

Gentlemen Make Move to Increase
Male Members—Meet at the Drain Home

The Book Club was entertained Tuesday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Grant Swett, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Drain.

Mr. and Mrs. Swett had expected to be at home in their own cottage on Mountain street and the book clubbers had hoped to find them a house-warming. It had been a genuine one, but was found to be impossible for them to get their house in order, so Mr. and Mrs. Drain opened their home to them.

There was a goodly number of members present with a number of invited guests. The business meeting was interesting as the book club business meeting always is. Communications from the committees on Household Economics, Library Extension and Music, were read. Mrs. E. M. Bare was appointed to represent the club on Household Economics committee of the Fort Smith district. Miss Belle Willis will act on the Library Extension and Mrs. Smith on the Music committee.

Since the ladies are in the majority in the book club and the gentlemen members do not believe in giving women the right to control in affairs of importance, Mr. Drain proposed the names of three gentlemen whom it was thought would help materially to overawe the lady members. These names will come up in due season for ballots, and the women intend that these gentlemen shall become members for they feel certain that on all questions of importance they would vote with them.

After the business was disposed of the meeting was turned over to the hostess who passed to each guest a sheet of paper on which were twenty numbers and they were told to name the advertisements which they would find pinned on the curtains in the parlor. All went to work and when time was called and the names of the ads read it was found that three had named seventeen out of the twenty. These were Miss Florence Pendergrass, Mrs. Baird and Vancil Klock. They drew straws

A Memory

A moonlight night in the calm September,
A full soft moon in the Southern sky,
The night winds' whisper, do you remember?
The world shut out, just you and I.

The night wind whispered strange sweet lore,
Of years and years its garsered store;
The sky yearned down till it kissed the earth,
And clasped 'round its horizon's girth;
The faint warm feel of the day-time air,
Still clung o'er all like incense rare.
Creation's undertones we heard,
Our heart-strings to life's keynote stirred,
And harmonies all unknown they sang,
Till the whole wide earth with music rang.

Oh, lesson sweet that we learned together,
Oh, rare, fond words in our lover's vow,
Oh, golden silence of night time weather,
I feel the spell of its being now!

And Nature hushed with tender croon,
Of night-wind's sigh and smile of moon,
Till fretful earth was lulled and slept,
While sacred silence fond lips kept;
And should long life no moment bring,
Like unto this of heart's wild fling,
All other years were worth but this,
To know one time all Love's fond bliss.
Ah, let stern Time his sorrows bring,
Life still is dear while memories cling.

FIREMEN CALLED TWICE TO CHRISTIAN COTTAGE

Burning Flue Cracks—Comparatively Little Damage Done

Yesterday just afternoon the fire alarm was sounded in the midst of one of the heaviest snow falls that ever came to Eureka. It was soon learned that the alarm came from the Christian Cottage.

The second story of the D. G. Blair property on Main street was destroyed by fire early Saturday morning. The building is used as a warehouse by Chas. Blair.

About 4 o'clock the fire alarm again called the firemen and citizens to the same place. Whether the fire had been smoldering or had been newly ignited from the defective flue is not known but it was speedily got under control. The roof and wood work were cut away from the flue and the chief ordered the fire extinguished in the house until the flue could be repaired.

A number of visitors were rooming in the cottage. Some sought other quarters, while others hastened their departure for home.

Central Business College, Sedalia, Missouri

A visit to this elegantly equipped college will convince anyone that a practical bookkeeper, stenographer and telegrapher can be thoroughly prepared in school. The work in the business and shorthand departments of this school is exactly the same in this institution as it is done in our best business houses.

In the telegraph and railway office department, everything is done exactly the same as in an actual office on the railroad. The railroads select the C. B. C. graduates in preference to the graduates of any other telegraph school in America. This telegraph school is pronounced by experienced railway men to be the most thorough and best equipped school in the United States.

D. G. BLAIR PROPERTY DESTROYED BY FIRE

Loss Reaches Several Hundred Dollars—
Library Burned

The second story of the D. G. Blair property on Main street was destroyed by fire early Saturday morning. The building is used as a warehouse by Chas. Blair.

The fire had gained much headway and although good work was done by the firemen, it was impossible to save the second story and the first floor and such contents as remained were badly damaged by water.

Mr. Blair's loss will reach several hundred dollars and many articles valued highly cannot be replaced. A splendid collection of books is a total loss. These had been accumulated through a number of years and these "old friends" will be much missed by Mr. Blair.

Indictment Drawn

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 20.—It became known tonight that indictments have been drawn in the government's beef investigation and that the return of true bills against the packers awaits the will of members of the federal grand jury who have heard the evidence submitted in the past four weeks by District Attorney Edwin W. Sims and his assistants.

Only the desire of the federal lawyers to submit an extensive review of the packing case and the anxiety of members of the jury to make the inquiry complete in all details have worked against the return of indictments before this date.

This attitude of thoroughness and carefulness will hold until the end of the probe, which may continue for two weeks longer.

The Times tells you the news.

A Count in Trouble

Hot Springs, Ark., Feb. 20.—"It is a devil of a mess, but I will see it through if I have to go through the supreme count of the land and call upon my ambassador for aid."

This is what Count de Beuford of London, three months' groom of the former Miss Irma Kelgallon, daughter of a wealthy Chicago manufacturer, said tonight after a constable had attached the four big trunks and small baggage he and his wife were just about to check to Chicago. The attachment came up over a roulette play at the Southern Club, the most palatial of the big Monte Carlo here.

The count thought that he was playing with ten cent chips but when he went to settle the club claimed the chips were worth $1 a piece and demanded $500 instead of the $50 the count was willing to pay.

FIFTY MILLIONS FOR THE RIVERS

Allowance Will Be Raised
By the Senate

Senators Frye and Burton Opposed
To Missouri Improvement—
Action Soon

Washington, Feb. 19.—Not only will the rivers and harbors appropriation bill pass the senate but when it goes through that body the total appropriations it will provide for have reached the $50,000,000 mark. This information today took up for consideration the house bill. A minority member, it is true, made this statement, but it is understood to be about accurate from the remarks of other senators.

Senator Frye, chairman of the committee, said that there was no doubt that the rivers and harbors bill would be passed at this session of congress. "It is really almost a necessity, because there has been no rivers and harbors appropriation for nearly three years," he said.

The committee took up the bill and read it. Early in the meeting Senator Burton took a prominent part in the discussion, as is by the fact that items in which it was thought the appropriations were too small were passed over with the idea of returning to them and increasing the amounts. None of the great middle western projects were reached, not even the Ohio river. Senator Frye, when questioned regarding the middle western projects, said that he and Senator Burton had always opposed the Missouri improvement.

"Are you still opposed to it?" Senator Frye was asked. "Well, I am open to conviction."

Senator Warner of Missouri has asked for time to present the Missouri river project before the committee. Other senators who have asked for hearings are Lorimer and Cullom of Illinois on the lakes-to-the-gulf project.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Lesan are here from Neosho, guests of the Thach. They came down with their son Mr. Harry Lesan, of New York, who came for his little daughter Rosemary. The little lady recently accompanied her grandmother, Mrs. J. T. Waddill, home from a visit in New York.

MOB DISARMS MILITIA MEN

Philadelphia Scene of Big Street Car Strike

10 AGAINST 10,000

Battles Between Strikers, Non
Strikers and Police—End
Not In Sight

Philadelphia, the "City of Brotherly Love", is in the throes of one of the worst street railway strikes in history. Last Saturday afternoon a strike was declared against the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company by the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees. The association asks an increase in wages and also that the transit company recognize no union except the Amalgamated. The company declined to recognize the Amalgamated exclusively and the men quit work. Cars were burned and the car service was suspended in the outlying districts, and were run in the downtown portion of the city only under heavy police protection. Many employees were dismissed for "the good of the service."

The strike became general and frequent clashes between rioters and the police occurred. The militia was called into service Tuesday. These were young soldiers. Two hundred four of them confronted a mob of 10,000 officers the militia were set by the crowds, their guns and ammunition taken from them and many of the men badly beaten and bruised and it looked as if they would be torn to pieces. At this point Acting Sergeant Buchler at the head of a detachment of ten mounted police arrived on the scene and engaged in a battle with the crowd in which clubs and revolvers were freely used on each side. At least twelve people were shot, some fatally, and scores were beaten and some crushed to death. For three days the rioting has continued and yesterday there seemed no immediate settlement of the difficulty in sight.

Death of An Infant

John Penn, the two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Porch, died at their home Saturday afternoon. The funeral services were conducted from the home, the Looney cottage on Spring street, Sunday afternoon by Rev. C. N. White, pastor of Calvary Baptist church. The young parents have the sympathy of a wide circle of friends.

The Records Speak

From what can be learned of Judge Harris of Madison county, who is the new opponent of C. A. Fuller for the democratic nomination for prosecuting attorney of this district, he is a man with a clean record and a good lawyer.

Some of the Fuller organ in the district are lamenting very much that their candidate is confronted with opposition. The Times is of the opinion that if the democrats of this district haven't a man who can defeat Mr. Fuller on his public record alone, they are in a bad way for material.

L. E. BAIRD, EDITOR AND MANAGER

IS HE COMPETENT?

In the current number of Pearson's Magazine appears the first of a series of articles under the caption, "The Betrayal of a Nation," by Alfred Henry Lewis. The writer from his first article it would appear, intends trying to show that President Taft has broken his promises to the people and has totally surrendered himself to the trusts and money kings of Wall street.

Mr. Lewis makes many statements unproven and unprovable and confesses himself incompetent to write of President Taft or any other public character when he says:

"If I like a man, I am not one to see flaws in him. If I don't like him, it is only after supreme effort that I discern in him any virtue, and then never very much."

To those who read "The Betrayal of a Nation" we would respectfully refer you to the words above quoted and ask you to judge whether a man acknowledging such characteristic is capable of judging the motives of President Taft. Just which foot Mr. Lewis' sore toe is on or how he got it remains to be learned, but, our word for it, it's there.

It is to be hoped that the council chamber of the city of Eureka Springs will never witness another such scene as transpired there last Friday night. The hearing of Water Superintendent W. N. Dale on charges preferred by the Monagan Plumbing company was a mere farce from start to finish and a disgrace to the city.

ECONOMY A LIVE ISSUE

The economy programme which Messrs. Taft, Aldrich and Cannon formulated at the beginning of this congress meant just what it said. Several appropriation bills have been cut below the estimates, and the estimates themselves were kept at a lower figure than would have been done if the economy idea had not been put forward. On a single day recently $25,000 was cut out of the West Point appropriation bill, $125,000 was refused for work which the immigration commission asked to do, and seventeen pension agencies are abolished by the pension appropriation bill in the form in which it has been reported to the house, thus affecting a saving of $84,000.

Clearly the economy idea is something more than a pretense. The republican leaders see the necessity for bringing down the expenditures of the government to the lowest point compatible with the good of the public service. The deficit is to be abolished, and the republicans see that the way to abolish it is to cut off all waste in the expenditures. In recent years the outlay has been on a lavish scale, and on this account there has been a treasury shortage which would have seriously hampered the republicans if there had been an opposition party of any consequence. From the president downward, however, the republican chiefs see the necessity of strengthening their party, regardless of democratic weakness and folly.

There is still a fair probability that the aggregate appropriations for this session of congress will be $35,000,000 or $40,000,000 below those of the session twelve months ago. The president started out with a determination to make a $50,000,000 cut, if possible. Apparently that figure will be rather closely approached. The necessity of having monthly surpluses instead of deficits during the congressional campaign is impressing itself on the minds of every member of congress. The absence of the deficit in September and October will make success easier for every republican candidate in the election in November. The surplus habit helped the republicans in the past, and it will do them a service again when it is cultivated.—Globe Democrat.

WHY SO FOOLISH?

In a recent issue the Chicago Tribune reports the result of a "poll" of the republican editors of twenty-six states in the west and middle west. The vote was on the following question:

"If you could vote for president, for whom would you cast your ballot?"

The result as published by the Tribune is as follows:

Roosevelt	1,360
Taft	1,093
LaFollette	197
Hughes	122
Cummins	65
Bryan	40
Pinchot	30
Cannon	14
Dolliver	14
Scatterling	116

Democratic papers take great pleasure in reproducing the result, possibly because it shows forty votes for Wm. J. Bryan.

That the Tribune's "results" are untrue is evidenced by the storm of protests going up from these very republican editors of the west and middle west.

They are coming so thick and fast as to leave little room to believe there is truth in the Tribune's figures.

Just why a paper of the prominence of Tribune should do a thing so long eared and asinine is "too many for us."

Those having the matter of drawing an ordinance to conform to the recommendations of the special water committee from the commercial club and city council were not ready with such ordinance on Friday night. This matter should be attended to at once.

The biggest lift Uncle Joe Cannon has had lately is the bogus poll of the Chicago Tribune to put him in false light.

The Times asks every citizen having the welfare of Eureka Springs at heart to consider the coming city election. With three councilmen to elect, it should be possible to select men for the positions, who would give the city an intelligent, honest and clean administration.

Three million dollars' worth of potatoes were imported into the United States during the year 1909 from England, Ireland, Scotland and Canada. The import was 25 cents a bushel. And yet democratic politicians try to tell the farmer that he has no benefit from the tariff.

The present indications are for a prosperous year for Eureka Springs and every man, woman and child should do all in their power to bring about this much desired condition. It cannot be done by telling every newcomer that Eureka Springs is a poor town. This talk is put out by the fellows that never do anything for themselves or the town. Listen to the knocker and see if this is not true.

During the year 1909 hides and skins were imported to the amount of $103,800,000. In the year previous the imports of hides and skins amounted to $57,000,000. The increase of imports in 1909 appears to be due to the removal of the tariff; but the foreigners put up the price and derived the benefit of the tariff reduction.—Ex.

And with the tariff removed and the increased influx of foreign hides we are confronted with an advance in price of shoes and other leather goods. But there are democratic dealers all over this country that are still telling their customers that this advance is due to the tariff.

FARM AND FIELDSeed Time

Some of these blustery days, when you can do little, if anything, out in the open, it will be a good time to make an inventory of your supply of seed for spring planting.

While it may be true that you stored a goodly supply of all kinds of seeds last fall, there are many agencies through which they may have been destroyed, or spoiled sufficiently to make them undesirable for planting purposes.

Rats and mice often sneak into seeds and nibble them; moisture may have reached them and caused them to mold; alternate heating and chilling may have shriveled them, weakening the germinating qualities till they will not propagate vigorous plants; or the seeds may not be really as good as they appeared when you selected them.

From the above, it will be readily seen that a thorough inspection and grading of seeds is necessary, and if best results are to be absolutely insured, it will even be advisable to make a test of germination, which may be done at practically no expense and with little labor. Simply divide a box of any desired size into compartments two inches square; fill with rich soil; plant seeds, and set in a warm place. All compartments should of course be numbered; likewise the seeds from which samples are planted.

Besides ascertaining the vitality of corn and oats, the corn should be carefully graded, and the oats run through the fanning mill. After grading the seed-corn, it is well to take an additional precaution by another sorting-out of all bad or imperfect grains, which ought to insure uniformity in dropping and a perfect stand. Fanning out the oats will serve a twofold purpose, while all weed-seeds are blown out, thus preventing the spread of these pests, as well as insuring a heavy crop yield and a clean, pure product at harvest time.

After the inspection, grading, etc., of all seeds, one can compare the amount of available good seeds with the area of the fields to be planted. If any more seeds will be needed, arrangements should be made at once for obtaining them. This is especially true if one expects to order seeds from a distance, as delays are often occasioned by seed houses being rushed during spring trade, or by seeds being delayed, damaged or lost in transit. Even if seeds are obtainable in the immediate neighborhood, it is advisable to ascertain at an early date exactly what seeds will be needed, so that all will be in readiness at seeding-time, and rush work may be carried right along, without stopping to do that which should have been done when there was plenty of spare time to do it.

30 Billion Dollars

The United States has 30 billion dollars invested in farm lands; their buildings, machinery and live stock, according to a census, the results of which have just been made public in the Orange Judd Farmer. From 1 million in 1850 the number of farms has increased to nearly 7 million in 1909, and the report adds:

"No such increase in agricultural land values was ever known before in the history of the world in any country. The value of farms in the United States has increased 44 per cent since 1900, the figures of that year showing an increase of 25 per cent over the previous decade."

The most remarkable figures presented show that the Western section, which includes New Mexico, Montana and other within the last ten years, has shown an increase in the value of farms of 100 per cent. At the same time the value has increased 98 per cent and the products 211 per cent.

Values of farms in the South Central states have increased 58 per cent and in the North Central states 43 per cent. In the North Atlantic states there has been an increase in value of 13 per cent and in the South Atlantic states an increase of 34 per cent.

New Depot at Joplin

Joplin is to have a new union depot and the cost is estimated at $1,000,000. It is proposed to have the depot ready for use by January 1, 1911.

It remained for the Missouri and North Arkansas railroad officials to first see the need of greater passenger and freight accommodations at the rapidly growing city of Joplin and more than two years ago President Scullin began negotiations which later resulted in the purchase of a suitable site for the building at the figure of $300,000.

After securing the site, President Scullin and Vice President Sands through successive negotiations with the officials of the Kansas City Southern, the Santa Fe and Missouri, Kansas and Texas railways, each of the four roads became one-fourth owner of the depot site with the object of erecting a union depot as stated above.

While in Joplin last week, Mr. Sands, speaking as a director of the Joplin Union Depot company, said that work on the new station would begin at once, as the sale of bonds for this purpose had been effected. He also said that the depot would be one of the finest in the country and would be thoroughly complete in every detail.

KITCHEN CABINET COLUMN

Busy Housekeeper's Reference Page

Smelling Salts

Smelling salts can be made in a few minutes. Into a small bottle place a teaspoon of salt, one teaspoon of ammonia, and any flower essence. Wood violet is mild and refreshing, without the sickening odor some very expensive salts contain.

To Remove Paint From Fabrics

Though paint has hardened and dried upon a garment, it may be removed with an equal part of ammonia and turpentine. Sponge the cleaned part with clear water.

Marks on Wall Paper

Marks on wall paper—not bad stains—may be removed with pipe clay. Mix the pipe clay to a thick paste and apply it to soiled places without rubbing the paper. Allow it to remain over night. Then brush the powder off.

Use for Discarded Feathers

Fluff the feathers of an old bed and fill a bag the size of the bed with feathers to make a fluffy quilt. Spread the feathers evenly cover the bag with imitation silk and knot it. You have a very light quilt which, in the future may easily be cleaned in gasoline.

Flag Cake

Flag cake, such as is served on Washington's birthday, and other days of patriotic interest, requires two different kinds of dough. One batch should be white and the other deep red, the latter made with plenty of red sugar in place of white. Bake the dough separately and make one small square cake of all white, which is to be coated with blue fondant for the field. Place alternate layers of red and white together and cut the cake into half-inch slices. Remove a square from each piece and insert the field.

Flags are made with gewdrop candy. Stick candy, no thicker than a soda straw may be used to make a more realistic flag appearance.

Colonial Hats

A pudding that would be appropriate for the 22nd celebration dinner is called "colonial hats." Very delicate crusts, as for pie, are made and rolled as thin as possible; a cup of stoned and chopped raisins, one egg, a cup of sugar, a pinch of salt and the juice and grated rind of a lemon are all mixed together, and a tiny piece of citron may be shredded into the mixture, of which spoonfuls are laid on squares of the crust, and these are pinched into the familiar cocked-hat shape. No vent is left, but the edges are firmly pressed together. By folding from three directions, the form is easily contrived. When laid in the baking pan brush all over with a little milk that has a teaspoonful of sugar dissolved in it. These need only from fifteen to twenty minutes to bake to a nice brown.

Sweet Potato Pudding

A good sweet potato pudding should have the potatoes boiled and mashed; add half a cup of sugar for each pint of the potatoes after mixing with milk to make them creamy; beat in three eggs and season with the grated rind juice of a lemon. It requires only twenty minutes to bake such a pudding.

Heavenly Food

Take three eggs, one cup of sugar, one teaspoonful baking powder, one and one half cups walnut meats, dates and nuts cut in small pieces, add enough flour to make stiff as pound cake. Bake in a shallow pan. Should be baked one week before cutting.

Mistakes of Parents

We are often puzzled as well as annoyed at the indecision of young people. They do not know how to decide any important question for themselves and if they do decide hastily, they soon regret it and want to change their minds. Frequently we can trace this to a mistake too often made by parents.

Knowledge is always power and the parents who are most kind and far-sighted are never the ones who shield their children from every cold blast and bring them up in ignorance, only to be turned loose at adult age without self-reliance, courage and a knowledge to decide what is best and wisest for their future life.

As a rule it is more often the mother who makes this mistake. One dear woman said to me some years ago: "I made up my mind that my children should never go through life handicapped as I have been. My mother was a woman with superior judgment and in business affairs my father always acted upon her judgment. I was never allowed any choice in my own clothes, was taught absolutely nothing in shopping or marketing, was never given an allowance. How could I learn self-reliance, and how I have suffered from the lack of it. My girls have every one learned to do marketing and shopping well. They have each had an allowance and been taught the use and abuse of money. As a rule their judgment is better than my own and I rely on them a great deal."

A boy who has had an allowance since he was twelve years old has today at eighteen as good judgment as his father in the selection of boy's or men's wearing apparel.

Not only does it teach self-reliance and textile values, but it teaches the value of money which is of still greater importance.

Reckless extravagance one month will necessitate greater economy the next.

Alas, that so many mothers think it unnecessary to teach their daughters the value of domestic accomplishments.

One grandmother who was a very practical woman said she could not afford to teach her granddaughter to cook. Herself a watchful economist, she was not farsighted enough to realize how she was handicapping that bright, capable girl who really wanted to learn cooking.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Basil Tempest, world's greatest novelist and poet, refusing to be further lionized, shuts himself up in Craven, his country home. His gloomy meditations are broken by his housekeeper who has disobeyed his orders not to admit any one to the house. The visitor is Lucy Carow, an American, who has come to England to write a study of the author, but most of all to get a synopsis of his new suite of poems, having been promised a good position with a magazine if successful. Tempest, in anger, declares he will write no more, and asks her to go. After Lucy departs Tempest repents of his rudeness in sending her away at night in the rain. He overtakes her, but she refuses to return to Craven with him, and takes lodging in a cottage. Next morning Lucy receives a note from Tempest, apologizing for his rudeness and offering to assist her in writing her essay. Tempest dictates to Lucy, who listens spellbound as she writes.

CHAPTER II.—Tempest calls at the cottage and discovers that Lucy has left to take a train for London. He overtakes her and induces her to remain over a day or two and read the manuscript to him. He invites her to dine with him. She declines, but says she will call the following day.

CHAPTER III.—Angry and disappointed, Tempest goes to London. He asks Lady Ormond, with whom his name has been linked, to leave her husband and go with him, promising to marry her when Ormond divorces her. She insists on the divorce first. Tempest says, "Good-by—no respite," and departs for Craven.

She looked at him curiously but not unaffectionately. "I'll be as grim as you like, Basil. What do you want me to feel?"

Tempest had covered his eyes with his hands, a gesture growing now second nature to him. He laughed softly as she spoke. "How perfect of you, Letty! What do I want you to feel? Why, do you then command your sentiments at call? Can I have them up at touch, have you so, many more for me than one?"

He uncovered his eyes and looked at her smiling. His expression was cynical and amused. "I don't want or not want you to feel in any particular way. I want to know how you do feel and to act accordingly."

She started—with him, at all events, a crisis was reached in their relations. She said, to gain time and to collect herself: "You are quite your usual singular self to-night—Je ne suis pas une femme tragique, and I think you might return after a few weeks' absence in a little more soothing mood! You are mysterious, and I am bewildered by your conduct."

He shrugged impatiently. "You know how little the last would affect me. I am going away on a longer journey than four weeks, and I want you to come with me."

She withdrew her hand, which he still held—not snatched it, but slowly and meditatively withdrew it. Tempest felt sensitively her complexion of mind—he had surprised, but not shocked her. Leaning towards her, in a low tone he pleaded with her, storming her citadel, whose weakness he knew. Afterwards, she thought in reviewing the moment that he had pleaded as one for life—as for a raft to be thrown to a drowning man. Was it possible he loved her like this?

"Do you realize what you are asking me to do?" she said in a pause.

"Yes," he said shortly, "give up a London and a husband whose life is notorious, whose existence is a plague to you, a reputation amongst those who have none themselves, a false situation for a sincere one, for a life with the man whom you say you love. Ormond will divorce you, and I will marry you at once."

Lady Ormond had believed the original Tempest who had made her forget everything but himself could not return with the old charm and imperious challenge. She had been wrong then in her belief, for he was talking her over again out of herself and beyond her control.

"Why are you like this?" she murmured with some emotion. "Will you be like this always? If I thought it, I could not hesitate."

At her tone, certainly not the one of brusque denial he had anticipated, Tempest experienced a curious mingling of exultant victory and of sincere regret.

"To-morrow, Letty," he said, and took her hand again, "you must come with me to-morrow."

In her utter surprise Lady Ormond was finding herself equal to Tempest's demands. She did not hesitate for one moment to make a concession he had never asked before. He was rich—would be richer—famous, not yet in the zenith of his celebrity. There was in sharing his life just one sacrifice, and that she determined not to make if she could avoid it.

"Basil!"—she leaned towards him, lifted her head in a way to reveal the clear, pure lines of her neck and chin, her face like a flower turned to the sun—"Basil, I am not cavilling, but you are so impetuous and impracticable. Let me get also a divorce from Ormond. It is merely a form—one I can have for the making. You don't wish to sacrifice me needlessly, do you? You are not an egotist, that you must see me humiliated, are you? You are not vain—really, you know—won't you let me get but decently?"

He smiled and sighed. "Decently!" he repeated with some scorn. "Can you, Letty?"

"I will see my lawyers to-morrow." He frowned and hurried: "Then you refuse to come with me?"

"No," she nodded determinedly. "I don't refuse. If you are set on ruining my reputation—for a whim—why, I won't stand in the way of your egoism."

He capitulated. "Well, you have surprised me, Letty; but then you are a perfect type, and I flatter myself now that I can predict the rest. You shall take the narrow and more reputable way, as you think it to be. But you won't come with me, Letty—you won't come."

"Nonsense," she laughed, and covered his lips with her hand. "You have my word."

Under the hand which he held to his lips he murmured something. It was "Good-by—no respite."

Lady Ormond was filled with satisfaction. She had been equal to the supreme occasion with Tempest; she was not an ordinary woman, then; she had proved her mettle and distinction and was worth the greatest man of the hour.

Tempest took his leave early, went to his club, and wrote her a note which she found on her dressing-table when she went, very shortly after, home and to her room.

Tempest was sitting in the smoking room of the Carlton when a note was brought and every eye was turned to him as the page's voice called, "Mr. Basil Tempest." He beckoned the boy and took the letter, which he thrust into his pocket and went up to his apartment. For a few seconds he turned the letter over in his hands as if he wished to defer certainty, his face gloomy, curious, and still mocking. Then, going close to the electric light so that all its force shone on the page, he took the single sheet of paper from the envelope.

"I don't know whether to blame you or myself—for dreaming a woman can share the life you write of—I for refusing. I know you still too well to discuss what you say—to advise or suggest. But I am not equal to the sacrifice."

"Bah!" he said, and before he had ended tore it in shreds and let the pieces fall as they would on the hotel carpet.

"I know people too well," he said. "There are no surprises for me. It's a curse to understand your kind—I wish I were a fool! It's only when a man's a fool or in love that he has any chance for happiness."

He stood thinking a second or two, wounded in his vanity—if not broken-hearted, then made his preparations for taking the next train for—shire.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Rowe left for Kansas City on Thursday of last week where they will visit with their daughter, Mrs. Brock Smith. After a short stay in Kansas City they will go to Bridgeport, Neb., where they will take up their residence on the fine piece of land recently homesteaded by Mr. Rowe. Their many friends here regret losing Mr. and Mrs. Rowe from Eureka Springs but hope to have them back again when they have made good their title to their valuable property.

A Big Show Coming

Porter J. White's representative's instructions to the opera house manager is to clear his stage of everything, including all scenery, mechanical effects and furniture, as they carry everything from a thunder sheet to a $10,000 garden set, in which there are over 6,000 square feet of scenery used and eight calciums, with a carload of effects. Will appear here next Saturday evening at the opera house.

Texarkana Schools Close

Texarkana, Ark., Feb. 21.—The development within the last two or three days of about a dozen cases of scarlet fever caused the school directors today on both sides the state line to order the public schools closed until further notice, as a precautionary measure to safeguard against a possible spread of the disease.

The boards of health have established strict quarantine upon the premises wherever there is a case of the disease, and have adopted other necessary precaution. The disease is said to be of a mild type.

Frisco Offers Scholarships

Columbia, Mo., Feb. 21.—So impressed is the Frisco Railway company with the success of the tour of the Missouri University agricultural and dairy special through the southern half of Missouri that the company has offered $4,500 in scholarships for a single year.

Scholarships will be distributed to the forty-five counties through which the Frisco passes. There will be no examination, but the winner in a corn-growing contest to be held in each county will be given the appointment. They will be used to pay $100 towards the expenses of the short winter course in the Missouri Agricultural College.

"While this generous gift has been offered only for one year," said Dean F. B. Mumford of the Agricultural college, "the officials of the company have given us every reason to expect that it will be renewed in case the experiment is a success."

Special Announcement

Arrangements have been completed for the final appearance here at the opera house Saturday night of that much beloved and ever popular presentation of Porter J. White's "Faust" with all the old time realistic and startling electrical effects and numerous new and novel devices in stage craft. In fact the production this year is claimed by managers to far surpass all previous undertakings of Goethe's great immortal play. Fred J. Wilson, better known among his college chums as "Nick, himself," has been particularly selected and he ably sustains Mephisto. Many critics agree, and approve of Mr. Wilson's light and airy interpretation of the character and his peculiar manner in holding an audience and making them feel that they are really on "good terms with the devil." Miss Olga Verne portrays the role of "Marguerite" and is strikingly beautiful and winning in the part. The gowns worn by Miss Verne were specially imported from Paris for this production. Faust, by Chas. E. Bird, is strong and impressive and his emotion genuine. Another enjoyable innovation is the song of the Intermezzo from "Cavileria Rusticana" the rendition of which expresses the perfection of vocal art. A choir of seven trained voices is a noteworthy feature in the Cathedral scene. The electrical effects are immense and afford a continual succession of startling surprises, notably in the "Broken scene" in the fourth act when the curtain falls to the accompaniment of a heavy shower of electrical sparks behind which are seen the witches and imps reveling in their fiendish merriment. An idea of the grandeur and vastness of this magnificent scene will be conveyed to our minds with the divulging of the fact that the paraphernalia for this last act of Porter J. White's "Faust" was this season secured at a cost of $9000 sixteen thousand feet of electrical wire being used. Prices: 25c to $1.00.

Much Needed Improvement

The pedestrian going from the Belding hotel to Vaughn street finds an improvement that is most noticeable and one that is highly appreciated in that splendid flight of steps recently put in leading up to the street.

Much credit is due Mr. Richard Quirk for the effort he put forth to have this improvement made. We are informed that by personal solicitation as well as a liberal donation he secured sufficient funds from the residents of the street to procure the material for the steps and the city did the work. It was a much needed improvement and is a credit to Mr. Quirk and his neighbors.

A Patriotic Service

A patriotic service will be held in the First Presbyterian church on next Sunday morning, when an address will be delivered by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Sturgis, on "Washington, the Moses of Modern History." The church will be decorated with the national emblem, and special music appropriate to the occasion will be rendered by the quartette choir, and solo specialists.

In the evening Dr. Sturgis will continue his series of Lenten Studies on Religion and the Practical Life." His subject being "The Opportunity and Obligation of the Individual Christian. Considered from the Viewpoint of Divine Truth." A most cordial invitation is extended to the general public to attend both services.

An Evening With the Book Club (Continued from First Page.) and Miss Pendergrass was the lucky one winning the prize.

After this came the "Rough House." There had been hidden in the house a large number of hearts, white, pink, and one large black one. The guests were told to hunt for these hearts. The white ones counted two, the pink ones five and the black one ten points in the contest. Miss Hazel Dickens found the black heart and enough smaller one to out number the others.

After these contests Mrs. Swett served an elegant three course luncheon consisting of chicken patties, hot biscuits, mixed pickles, pimento salad with wafers, ice cream with strawberry preserve angel food and coffee.

Mrs. Swett was assisted in serving by her mother, Mrs. Davis, and Miss Florence Pendergrass.

The book clubbers voted this one of the most delightful of their many pleasant meetings and will cheerfully respond when the time rolls around again to be entertained by this young couple. The next meeting will be in two weeks at the Baird home in the Tower Heights neighborhood.

Frank Beck, one of our prosperous farmers on Route 2, has discovered that the poultry market is considerably better than it used to be. He sold 17 turkeys in Green Forest the other day at 15 cents a pound netting him $46.70 for the bunch. Ten years ago he sold a similar bunch after hauling them to Eureka Springs for 5-12 cents a pound. Before that turkeys commonly sold at from 30 to 50 cents each.

It is officially given out that there will be no oil well brought in at Green Forest within the coming two or three weeks, as drilling is going to be suspended to await another consignment of casing, which is necessary on account of strong flow of water, the volume of which seems to increase as the drill proceeds downward. Mr. Payne has gone to Oklahoma to look after some business affairs that will probably occupy his attention for a month.
